Albany Drama
Is Tragedy And Farce

The crisis state food means for poor, with people now struggling for basic public utilities. As they seek the city’s $700 in food stamps and cash assistance, which are down 30% since 2008, more and more people are being forced to turn to food banks. In addition, the city is struggling to keep up with the demand for food aid, and the city’s food banks are becoming increasingly crowded.

The city of New York has seen a 40% increase in the need for food assistance since the start of the recession. The city’s food banks have seen an 80% increase in the number of people seeking help. The city’s food banks are now facing a Crisis of Food Supply, as they struggle to keep up with the需求 for food aid.
