Section 12: Special Topics (all respondents)

1. Now I have some questions on a completely different topic. As you may know, President Bush has limited Federal funding of stem cell research to existing stem cell lines and has curtailed funding for the development of new stem cell lines. This past November, citizens in the state of California passed a proposition that authorizes state bonds to fund stem cell research within California. Specifically, the initiative establishes a California Institute for Regenerative Medicine to regulate and fund stem cell research and establishes a constitutional right to conduct such research and an oversight committee. However, it prohibits funding of human reproductive cloning research. The bond proposition costs the state a total $6 Billion over thirty years and provides funding of $200 million annually.

If a similar proposition were placed before voters in New York State, how likely would you be to vote for such an initiative? Would you say you would be...?
